
@thehunkiedorie
Hunkie Dorie™
and the Kite of Destiny
Media Kit
written and illustrated by
A. M. French

Hello

I'M A. M. FRENCH

CHILDREN'S AUTHOR & ILLUSTRATOR

CONTACT

www.amfrench.com
+1 678-435-9858
lettersfromhunkie@amfrench.com
@thehunkiedorie

ABOUT

A. M. French has always loved animals and adventure stories. From exploring forests, beaches and mountains to traveling across the globe, she finds inspiration in the wild places of the world. Her passion for protecting nature and her joy in storytelling come together in Hunkie Dorie and the Kite of Destiny—her first children's book, and the first book in a series.

When she isn't writing, A. M. French loves discovering new corners of the world, relaxing with a cup of tea, and dreaming up new adventures for children and families to enjoy together.

SAMPLE Q&A

Q1. What inspired you to write Hunkie Dorie and the Kite of Destiny?

My kids! I've always loved travel and wildlife. And when my children were small, they were always asking for another bedtime story. Hunkie's story began as a simple idea — what would happen if a small, adventurous panda flew away on a homemade kite? From there, she grew into a symbol of courage, compassion, and believing in your dreams. And my Mom. She never gave up on my dream!

Q2. Why did you choose to write a children's book with an environmental message?

The natural world has always been my greatest source of inspiration. I wanted to create a story that sparks wonder while gently teaching children that every creature — no matter how small — plays a role in our planet's wellbeing.

Q3. Who is Hunkie Dorie™ for?

Children ages 0–7 love the read-aloud adventure, and early readers up to age 8 enjoy following Hunkie's journey on their own. Families, teachers, and nature lovers also connect with its themes.

Q4. What do you hope children take away from this book?

That courage isn't about not being afraid, and even the smallest steps can lead to extraordinary places. And, of course, that friendship and kindness matter — especially when you're far from home — as well as caring for the animals we share our world with.

Q5. Is this book part of a series?

Yes! Hunkie Dorie™ has many adventures ahead, each featuring new places, new animal friends in need, and new lessons about the world around us.

Q6. How did your own travels influence the story?

Exploring forests, beaches, and mountains across the U.S., Ireland, and Europe helped shape the characters that Hunkie meets and the landscapes she discovers. Each setting carries a little piece of my own journey.

Q7. What advice do you have for aspiring children's authors?

Write the story that lights up your heart — the one you wish someone had told you when you were young, or the one your own children asked for over and over again. Children respond to authenticity, wonder, and warmth, so pour all of that in.

Q8. Why did you choose to self-publish?

Self-publishing gave me full creative freedom to build Hunkie's world exactly as I envisioned it — from the illustrations to the messaging to the series direction.

Q9. What themes can teachers or parents discuss with children after reading the book?

Courage, problem-solving, friendship, emotional resilience, environmental stewardship, curiosity, and the value of exploring new places.

Q10. What future projects are you planning?

More Hunkie Dorie™ books, additional activities for children, educational resources for teachers, and expansions into merchandise!

MEDIA ASSETS

A.M. French

At last, they came to a lovely pond tucked in among the rocks and cattails. Hunkie's eyes lit up. The water sparkled in the sun and looked wonderfully cool and remarkably wet.

As Hunkie leaned over to take a sip, an enormously large, fantastically shaggy camel strolled up and lowered her head right beside them, slurping so loudly the Golden Monkey made a terrible face.

"Pardon us!" blurted the Monkey. "I do believe we were here first."

"Oh, hellew!" said the Camel between gulps. "You're right on time. I was waiting for you, and while I was waiting, I was remembering every drink I've ever taken at this oasis, and this one is easily the freshest since the Rainfall of '81… or was it the Storm of '62? Or maybe it was… Well, never you mind, I remember the puddles. Enormous, splashy puddles!" The Camel blinked slowly. "Now where was I?"

46

HUNKIE DORIE AND THE KITE OF DESTINY

Title: Hunkie Dorie and the Kite of Destiny
Author: A. M. French
Series: Hunkie Dorie™
Genre: Children's Picture Book
Age Range: 0–7 (read-aloud), 4–8 (independent reading)
Price: $9.99-Paperback; $19.99-Hardcover; $2.99-eBook
Pages: 92

ISBNs:
- Hardcover: 979-8-9932996-0-0
- Paperback: 979-8-9932996-1-7
- eBook:979-8993299624

Publication Date: November 1, 2025
Publisher/Imprint: She2She Media
Formats: Hardcover, Paperback, eBook

Available At: Amazon, IngramSpark, Barnes & Noble, Apple Books, Kobo, Website: https://www.amfrench.com

Wholesale Terms:
- Discount: 40–55%

Synopsis
Every great adventure begins with a homemade kite and a curious panda. When a gust of wind sweeps Hunkie Dorie far from her home, she meets incredible creatures, discovers unexpected friendships, and learns that even the smallest adventurers can find courage when it matters most.

Key Themes
Courage • Friendship • Curiosity • Emotional Growth • Environmental Awareness

Audience Fit
Perfect for families, teachers, libraries, eco-conscious readers, and children who love animal stories and adventure.

Testimonials/Reviews
"The illustrations are outstanding, the message is warm and nourishing, and the story is completely captivating." - Annie R McEwen - Award-Winning Author

Contact Info:
lettersfromhunkie@amfrench.com
www.amfrench.com

Images Included:
• Cover image
• Author photo

BOOK EXCERPT

From Hunkie Dorie and the Kite of Destiny
By A. M. French

“But WHY can’t I go kite-flying with them, Mama?” asked Hunkie, with a rather determined look, though it wobbled a bit at the edges.

Hunkie moaned as she plopped herself on the floor of the hollow tree she shared with her mother and three older sisters—Peazie, Squeezie, and Boo. They all loved her very much, but they were always telling her she wasn’t big enough.

“I've spent all winter working on my kite, and I want to try it out!” she said, holding her kite high and twirling round and round. It was, perhaps, the finest kite ever made by any panda. Hunkie had worked tirelessly to make it perfect, and the tail was so long that, if you weren’t careful, you might trip right over it—which is exactly the sort of trouble kite tails like to cause.

“You’re too little, Hunkie,” said Squeezie, who liked being in charge.

“And much too small to keep up,” added Peazie, who was the oldest, and usually agreed with Squeezie, except when she didn’t. She leaned closer and whispered softly, “Besides, you might get carried off if the wind blows too hard. We’d worry about you.”

And Boo—who always loved saying exactly the wrong thing—stuck out her tongue and said, “You’ll just blow away.”

“I will not!” said Hunkie, arms folded as she responded with a stuck-out tongue of her own.

“Now stop all this kerfuffling, both of you,” said Mama, with a look that let them know she meant business. “Go and take your baths and get ready for bed. Tomorrow will be an exciting day, indeed!”

The sisters tumbled outside in a rush of ribbons and tails, leaving Hunkie behind with her kite. She kicked a stone across the floor, which is precisely the sort of thing you do when you are quite upset, but not sure what to do about it.

That night, after her bath, Hunkie climbed into bed. She had almost forgotten about being cross, because excitement has a way of pushing crossness right out of the way. And that much excitement makes it rather difficult to fall asleep, unless you are very small and very tired, which she was.